

Henry Tat Quach

Henry Tat Quach is a fifth year doctoral student in the Laboratory Medicine & Pathobiology program at the University of Toronto. Under the supervision of Drs. Amy Wong and Theo Moraes, he is interested in understanding how CFTR expression impacts fetal lung development. He is very interested in thoroughly characterizing the human fetal lung and the Wong lab's hPSC-derived fetal lung cells using single cell technologies with the help of Dr. Spencer Farrell.

henry.quach@sickkids.ca (quach.henry@hotmail.com)
<https://scholar.google.ca/citations?hl=en&user=fzdg0WUJ>
www.linkedin.com/in/henry-quach-22499718a

Word cloud containing terms related to fetal lung development and research interests, including: fetal, lung, interested, wong, drs. farrell cell, theo, help, human impacts program supervision pathobiology development, thoroughly moraes fifth cfr, hpsc-derived, using medicine spencer dr., 's characterizing technologies, single amy, toronto expression oratory tat, doctoral year.